WARTENBERG SIGN

In ulnar nerve compression the third volar interosseous muscle is weak and allows the extensor digiti minimi to abduct the fifth finger during extension causing finger catching while placing the affected hand in pocket.

De Quervain's Syndrome Treatment

• Steroid Injection

- injecting steroids into the tendon sheath of the first dorsal compartment with the wrist over a rolled up towel.

How do you treat radial wrist pain. Wrist syndrome symptoms. What is dorsal wrist syndrome. Wartenberg syndrome vs radial tunnel syndrome.

Wartenberg's syndrome is a peripheral neuropathy caused by entrapment of the superficial radial nerve (SRN), presenting with paresthesia in the nerve distribution [1]. Currently, there are no established guidelines or recommendations for the proper treatment of this condition. As such, the objective of this paper is to complete a literature review outlining the diagnosis and treatment of Wartenberg's syndrome. Wartenberg's syndrome is a peripheral neuropathy caused by entrapment of the superficial radial nerve (SRN), presenting with paresthesia in the nerve distribution [1]. Currently, there are no established guidelines or recommendations for the proper treatment of this condition. As such, the objective of this paper is to complete a literature review outlining the diagnosis and treatment of Wartenberg's syndrome. A systematic literature search was completed and up to date as of February 5th, 2018. The data bases MEDLINE (Ovid), EMBASE (Ovid) and Cinahl were searched using engine specific strategies unique to each database to maximize sensitivity (Appendix A). Abstract and titles were stored and compiled in Zoter-GTM reference manager. Two reviewers (GM and JC) independently reviewed the title and abstracts of each citation to ensure the paper involved true cases of Wartenberg's syndrome. A Studies that seemed to meet the above went on to full text review. All levels of evidence were accepted from randomized controlled trials to case reports. After screening, the results of our search produced 7 case series and 23 case reports. The number of patients in each study ranges from 1-51, with an average patient age of 41 years, with the majority of patients being female. Etiologies range from work related complaints to idiopathic disease due to systemic diseases and congenital anomalies. Associated conditions include De Quervain's syndrome, carpal tunnel syndrome, flexor tenosynovitis, and lateral epicondylitis. In addition, 7 patients had a history of smoking, 7 patients had a history of alcohol abuse, and 7 patients had a history of diabetes. The most common cause of Wartenberg's syndrome is a double crush syndrome, where the nerve is compressed at two different points. This can occur at the elbow and the wrist, or at the wrist and the hand. The nerve can also be compressed by a tumor or a bone fracture. Other causes include trauma, infection, and inflammation. Treatment options include conservative management, such as physical therapy and corticosteroid injections, and surgical intervention, such as nerve decompression surgery. The prognosis for Wartenberg's syndrome is generally good, with most patients experiencing relief of symptoms within 6 months of treatment. However, some patients may require long-term management or even surgery. It is important to note that Wartenberg's syndrome is a rare condition and should be considered in the differential diagnosis of peripheral neuropathy.
